SPRING!

A Time for Rebirth and Renewal
By Dame Andrea Mikana-Pinkham

Vernal Equinox
by Ernestine Grindal

For those of us living in the Northern Hemisphere, Spring is finally here! Bringing with it a time to celebrate the turning of the wheel of the year as the death and decay of winter gives way to a time of renewal and rebirth. In the world of nature, beginning with the first green shoots, Spring explodes into a multitude of beautiful blossoms, giving its promise of growth and fertile abundance. In ancient times many festivals were held to celebrate the Spring Goddesses who were associated with flowering, growth and fertility of the land. Below are some of them, taken from myths from around the world:

Anna Perenna (Roman) was associated with the cycles of the year and renewal. Her main Festival was celebrated on Ides of March.

Artio (Swiss) is the bear Goddess who hibernates during the Winter; Her return heralds the beginning of Spring.

Beiwe (Finnish) is associated with the fertility of plants and reindeer. Together with her daughter Beiwe-Neia, they turn the hills green so the reindeer can feed.

Blodewedd (Celtic) was created by magic from nine spring flowers to be the wife of Llew Llaw.

Brigit (Celtic) is honored in Her Maiden aspect at the festival of Imbolc, which celebrates the first stirrings of Spring.

Dziewanna (Eastern European) is the Goddess of Spring and Agriculture, and is especially honored by local farmers.

Flora (Roman) was the Goddess of flowering plants, especially those that bore fruit. Her festival, the Floralia, took place in April or early May and was marked with dancing, drinking, and flowers.

Freya (Nordic), the fertility Goddess, is linked with spring growth and flowers.

Hare Ke (West African) is the Goddess of the sweet waters fed by the spring rains that brings fertility back to the land.

Ostara (Celtic) is the Goddess of fertility and rebirth. Her sacred symbols of painted eggs and white rabbits have been incorporated into the Christian celebration of Easter.

Kono-Hana-Sakuya-Hime (Japanese) is associated with the Springtime and cherry blossom. Her name means "Lady who makes the trees bloom." She is also Goddess of the sacred site Mount Fuji.

Kostroma (Russian) is a fertility Goddess and personification of Spring. In Russian mythology she dies at the end of each Spring, only to arise once more at the end of the following winter.

Lada (Eastern European) is the Goddess of Spring and Love who is worshipped in Lithuania, Poland and Russia.

Maia (Greek) represented the forces of growth and the return of the sun's warm rays.

Olwen (Celtic) is the Goddess of sunlight who reappears every Spring, leaving behind Her a trail of white clover wherever She walks.

Persephone (Greek) is the Greek Goddess of Spring. Her mother Demeter mourned her as she left for the underworld each Autumn, causing the land to become cold and barren. When She returned in the Spring the happy Demeter would bestow the land with growth and abundance.

Prosepina (Roman) was the Roman counterpart to Persephone and daughter of the grain Goddess Ceres.

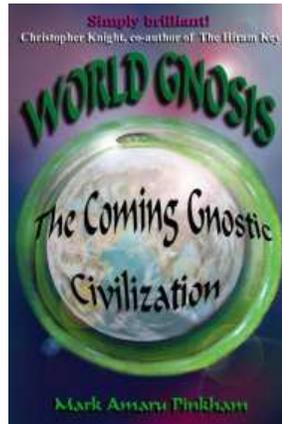

Sita (Hindu) is the Spring Goddess of agriculture and the earth.

If any of these aspects of the Goddess calls to you, perhaps you'd like to do a bit more research about Her. As well, we invite you connect with Her through meditation. Take some time away from your busy life, go to your altar and light a spring-colored candle (green or pastels), and invite Her energy into your space. Be open to a message from Her about renewal and growth. She's sure to communicate in the way that's perfect for you!

Sufi Beginnings of the Illuminati Conspiracy
Excerpted from World Gnosis: The Coming Gnostic Civilization
by IOGT Grand Prior Mark Amaru Pinkham

The year 1776 arrived with a flourish. This was the pivotal year that saw the founding of the first Sub-Rosa nation in the New World, the United States of America, and the official beginning of the gnostic Order of the Illuminati in Germany. Founded by Adam Weishaupt, the Professor of Cannon Law at the University of Ingolstat in Germany, the Illuminati was calculated to be the final vehicle in the movement to precipitate a one-world spirituality. Although this movement had, in recent history, begun with the Knights Templar, its roots were much more ancient and could be traced at least as far back as the Sufis.

The visionary Sufi Master who first proposed a crusade to create a one-world spirituality was Abdullah ibn Maymun during the Ninth Century. Maymun was born in southern Persia and brought up in an eclectic environment of intellectuals, which included both Persian Gnostic and Ishmaili Shiite teachers. Endowed with both mystical insight and a very ambitious temperament, from a young age Maymun proved his ability to understand the highest and most abstruse gnostic teachings of the Ismailis. So when the first opportunity arose to ascend the Ishmaili hierarchy Maymun easily found support among his peers. His subsequent activities and reforms as an Ishmaili chief would prove pivotal not only to the Ishmaili but to the later Knights Templar and the Illuminati.

Maymun was one of the first Sufi synthesizers to amalgamate the numerous ancient religious and alchemical traditions gobbled up by the conquering Moslems into a new mystery school tradition. His mystery sect of the Batinis, which was founded in 909 CE with seven levels of advancement, became a model that would be adopted by many future Sufi mystery sects. Maymun's exceptional ability to synthesize both people and spiritual traditions together set him apart from his peers and ultimately gained him fame. One Islamic historian remarked: "To link together into one body the vanquished and the conquerors; to unite in the form of a vast secret society with many degrees of initiation free thinkers-who regarded religion only as a curb for the people...to induce conquerors to overturn the empires they had founded...such was Abdullah ibn Maymun's general-an extraordinary conception which he worked out with marvelous tact, incomparable skill and a profound knowledge of the human heart...."

Maymun's mission quickly gathered many converts, but it also quickly imploded when his followers began to resort to violence to achieve their goal of a one-world gnostic spirituality. When his teachings became embraced by the warring Karmathites, thousands of innocent persons who refused to convert to Maymun's doctrines were slain. The final debacle occurred when 30,000 Moslems were massacred for standing in the way of the Karmathites' campaign to conquer Mecca. When the Karmathites were themselves soundly defeated soon afterwards it had become crystal clear that another approach was needed if the world was to be won over to a higher cause.

The basic principals of Maymun's mystery tradition and his global movement were both were adopted in 1004 CE by the Dar-ul-Himat, the "House of Wisdom" mystery school of Cairo, which became the premier training ground for Ishmaili Sufis. The House of Wisdom adopted Maymun's seven levels of mystical advancement, to which two more were added to make nine degrees. These nine degrees mirrored other gnostic mystery traditions, such as the Kuala tradition of India, by embracing Right Hand Path practices and theology in their early degrees, and then progressing through the Left Hand Path practices in their later degrees to achieve transcendence and gnosis.

According to historical speculation, Weishaupt was initiated and trained by a direct initiate from the Ismailis' House of Wisdom five years previous to his founding the Illuminati. At that time Weishaupt is said to have been visited by a gnostic adept who had spent years in Egypt studying the mystical traditions of the Dar-ul-Himat. This charismatic and persuasive adept is said to have possessed both an exceptionally strong personality and a high level of gnostic awareness.

One identification that has been suggested for this mysterious adept is that of a Danish merchant named Kolmer, who after sojourning in Egypt for many years, arrived in Europe seeking converts for both the Ishmaili and gnostic Manichaeism teachings he had become a proponent of. His predilection for the Persian Gnostic path aligned him directly to the early Sufis, many of whom had originated in Persia, including the Sufi Maymun.

Before meeting Weishaupt, Kolmer is said to have stopped off in Malta to enroll the Knights of Malta in his scheme for a one-world empire. He was, apparently, less than successful and the Knights sent him packing, but not before he had a pivotal meeting with the alchemist and gnostic, Alessandro Cagliostro, who was residing in Malta at the time. Cagliostro never mentioned Kolmer by name in his diaries, but he repeatedly alluded to one of his teachers named Althotas, which is believed to be a cryptic name for Kolmer.

After Weishaupt's visit with the mysterious adept from Egypt, he spent the following five years gathering together the components of an organization that in 1776 would become officially known in Bavaria as the Illuminati. In its synthesized form the Illuminati was a gnostic-chemical mystery school with strong Sufi, Persian, Egyptian, Greek, Manichaean and Freemasonic influences. Of these, it was perhaps the Persian influence that was most salient and foundational. Weishaupt adopted both the Persian calendar, as well as the floppy hat of the Persian savior, Mithras, which became the Illuminati's most recognizable symbol.

Know Your Destiny, Know Your Dharma

When you know your destiny you will understand your Dharma. Your Dharma is the special work you were born to do in this life. Astrology is a good tool to use for understanding your destiny and dharma. A Natal Astrological reading will inform you of your basic dharma and what planetary forces will most powerfully be directing your destiny throughout life. A Vedic or Hindu chart can also inform you as to what planet is predominant in your life at any given time. At some point you will pass through a Mars Cycle of 7 years, a Moon Cycle of 10 years, a Jupiter Cycle of 16 years, etc., until you have moved through all the planetary cycles. Once you know your current cycle, you will know what planet is predominant in your life and how to use that energy constructively and positively.

Astrology can also be a valuable tool that can inform you when you are under planetary influences that are conducive to spiritual work and gnostic experience/development. These should be the periods when you plan a Vision Quest and/or increase the length and frequency of your spiritual practices.

Empower Yourself With Gems

When you have your Astrological Natal Chart erected you will know what gems to wear in order to align positively with the planets controlling your destiny. These are generally planets that are strong and favorably disposed in your chart. You will also know what gems can be harmful to you because they are governed by unfavorable planets in your chart. Besides wearing stones indicated by the natal chart, a Gnostic Warrior should also wear stones ruled by the planet whose cycle he or she is progressing through.

Support from Lords and Ladies of the Rays

A Vedic Astrological Natal Chart will also reveal what your Ray is. Every person is aligned with one or more of the Seven Rays that the Goddess Sophia divided herself into when creating the universe. Knowing your Ray will give you information as to what role you will play in the Goddess's family as well as the Ray Lord's and Ladies that are supporting you in life. Each Ray has two or more Lords or Ladies that protect and support those born under that Ray. They can be called upon at any time for protection, guidance and support.

The Seven Rays of Healing Correspondence Course

Through the Seven Rays of Healing Correspondence Course you can learn how to determine your Ray and the Rays of other people, as well as how to treat yourself and others medicinally in accordance with your Ray. The Seven Rays of Healing is a complete and comprehensive system of natural healing that will assist you in diagnosing and treating most illnesses that do not require emergency medicine or surgery. The Seven Rays Healing System unites Peruvian, Chinese, and Hindu healing systems and is one of the only gnostic approaches to healing in the world today.
